PRIME “Cut by Cut”

Filet Mignon

The most tender beef cut. Meat is succulent yet lean, elegant and convenient. Velvety buttery texture accompanied with subtle flavour in a compact shape.

Skirt Steak

A deep, rich, beefy flavour. When slicing, cut through the grain. Best be grilled, but must marinate first.

Prime Rib

Rich in flavour, juicy, tenderness and majestic appearance. The grand champion of beef roasts. One of the most tender beef cuts. Fine-grained with generous marbling, that melts in your mouth.

Ribeye Steak

A rib steak minus the bone. A fine-grained steak, that is rich with beefy flavour. Juicy meat that is generous in marbling texture throughout the surface. One of the most tender beef cuts.

T-bone Steak

Combines two lean, tender steaks. Consist of both top loin (strip) and tenderloin steaks, which are connected by a tell-tale T-shaped bone. If diameter of tenderloin is smaller than golf ball, it's usually considered a T-bone. If larger than a golf ball, it is considered a Porterhouse.

Short Ribs

Tender, juicy and meaty; can be cut long, short or boneless. A less tender cut. Take full advantage of its great taste when braised.

Striploin / Sirloin Steak

Lean, tender and full-flavoured. Meat is best for a quick-cooking. Steak with fine-grained that is sturdy in texture.

Oyster Blade Steak

Well-marbled, tender and juicy; second in tenderness only to tenderloin and about half the cost. Boneless steak has excellent beef flavour.

The steaks are cross-cut from the top blade. It has a line of tough connective tissue down the middle, creating a tough steak best suited to braising. It is becoming more popular and profitable to abstain from cross cutting the top blade and instead produce flat iron steaks which eliminate the connective tissue.
